EAPA represents its members from 16 countries (representing more than 70% of European asphalt production) by:

- Monitoring new legislation and regulation and challenging these when necessary
- Lobbying in the European Commission and Parliament
- Working with EU Research bodies on innovative solutions to pavement design
- Organising meetings for and with members to discuss issues of importance to the industry, not least Health and Safety and Technical matters
- Working in alliance with other associations to further the interests of EAPA members, notably the Global Asphalt Pavement Alliance (GAPA), formed in 2008
- Organising conferences and congresses

“We recognize in the UK that 85% of all national legislation, regulation and, in our industry, product standards originate in Europe. Our membership of EAPA is, therefore, an absolute essential part of our representation of the UK industry.”

About EAPA

Over 90% of the total European road network is of asphalt construction. There are over 4,000 production sites in Europe and over 10,000 companies are involved in production and/or laying of asphalt. The European Asphalt Pavement Association (EAPA) already represents the majority of the industry engaged in asphalt road construction and maintenance in the whole of Europe and beyond.

EAPA is the acknowledged contact point for its members, other industry organisations and of course the European Institutions. Based in Brussels at the heart of the European Union, EAPA is perfectly situated to interact at the European level.

Why is such an association needed?

- To make the voice of the industry heard at European level.
- To promote the sustainable use of asphalt in the construction and maintenance of roads throughout Europe.
- To take a proactive approach in presenting the industry's positions on, and make a substantial input to European legislation and standards relevant to the Asphalt paving industry.
- To be a platform for its members to discuss issues crucial to the sector and exchange best practice and information.
- To drive permanent improvements in the Health, Safety and Environmental performance of the industry.

"We are members of EAPA because influence in the EU is increasingly important and because EAPA provides us with value adding networks."

Anders Hundahl, CEO, Danish Asphalt Pavement Association
